Problem: The fire protection installed in high value buildings of strategic importance will often only meet the minimum requirements of the Building Regulations. This minimal specification, only to comply with the need to evacuate the building, will then be compromised by the fitting of cabling and other building services. Contractors will sometimes 'make good' using products that do not reinstate fire integrity.

Solution: Having surveyed the building, all damaged fire and acoustic separation is reinstated using fire and acoustic tested products to the required specification. In addition fire protection in areas of strategic importance can be upgraded.
